The House-Tree-Person Technique Revised Manual - John N Buck - 2009-06-09

House-Tree-Person is a projective personality test, wherein a person responds to a given stimulus, and the responses given class about the person’s hidden emotions or unconscious psychological conflicts. It essentially belongs to the primary domain of a house, a tree, and a person; that’s why the name. These drawings render a measure of self perceptions and attitudes inherent in a personality. The HTP test is adhered to, along with other techniques, in cases where there is likelihood of brain damage, other neurological disorders, or to evaluate brain damage in patients of schizophrenia. It can be taken in any language by anyone who is 3 years old or above. The House-Tree-Person test is given in 20 minutes. This test is first asked to draw a house, then a tree, and lastly a person. If we are told to draw some object, we might either shy away (for not being good at it) or we might enjoy the process itself (regardless of our artistic abilities). While firmly grounded in a psychodynamic view of personality development, the volume also conveys a clinical tool for the qualitative interpretation of the drawings. The House-Tree-Person drawings are from comprehensive case studies that follow adult patients from the beginning phase of treatment to their one-year (or more) status. These include over 30 chromatic illustrations that clearly demonstrate the importance of color in projective drawing interpretation.
