The rock band wishful thinking had a hit in 1971 with hiroshima, a song about the bombing. The song was also dedicated to the victims of war in afghanistan and iraq. Hiroshima is a 1990 single by german singer sandra. It is a cover of a song written by david morgan and first released by british band wishful thinking in 1971. The lyrics briefly refer to hiroshima and nagasaki, but the song's main focus is hitler's rise to power and the destruction caused by nazi germany. the lyrics also mention the atomic bombings of hiroshima and nagasaki, but in a way that minimizes their impact and glorifies the victors. the song was criticized by japanese media for belittling the atomic bombing of nagasaki and the experience of its survivors. however, the lyrics were changed to a more respectful form upon release of the english version of the song.
