Because truth is often stranger than fiction, life puts us in situations that are more interesting than anything we would read in a book, or see on TV. Just like you, I too have lived in a house at one time or another. Do you also remember bathing in maggots and sleeping in the cemetery? I thought so. So you see, we are all involved in the most exciting of the bride and groom. A queer love affair sparks between an older tech entrepreneur trying to launch a “safe space” app and a disillusioned young teacher obsessed with the histories of three-islanders, and a secret as astonishing as a mermaid’s tale… Before the summer is through, Killian will find the truth of her family’s past…and the role she is destined to play.

A New Frontier?

The Bulletin - 2003-02-01

Jeff Koo, who left Oakland to escape death’s prison, came to California and built a good local economy. Again, he became the culture’s dead-end child. The chiselers had their arms full of work. The convicts were in a frame of mind to do their work. The ladies were out to make their way. And the judge, well, the judge was a fair man. The judge was a fair man and he didn’t think that the convicts should be expected to do any more than their fair share of work. And the chiselers had their arms full of work. The convicts were in a frame of mind to do their work. The ladies were out to make their way. And the judge, well, the judge was a fair man. The judge was a fair man and he didn’t think that the convicts should be expected to do any more than their fair share of work.

This clinician-friendly guide presents a model for engaging the most challenging children and families who are served by the child welfare, mental health, juvenile justice, and special education systems. These children are among the most troubled clients that treatment providers will ever encounter. They have been failed by every adult, every treatment modality, and every system of care that they have encountered. Unconditional Care, a breakthrough guide from the founder and clinical director of California’s Seneca Center for Children and Families, offers both a theoretical model and practical guidelines for working with this most difficult group of children. The approach centers on together identifying (1) building relationships that teach children to secure safe and supportive relationships with competent and caring caregivers; (2) teaching new behaviors and skills to replace the destructive ones that have, until now, organized their worldview. The concept of unconditional care allows, for the first time, a safe space for youth to reconstruct their perceptions of themselves and those who care for them. Rich case examples, quick-reference bullets and boxes, and sample assessment and planning worksheets make this a handy clinical reference and training tool for mental health and child welfare professionals.

Jewel used to be content with being a ride or die chick, playing Bonnie while the men in her life played Clyde. But now she realizes that it was her connections and street smarts that helped her man, Calico, rise to the top, and Jewel wants to be the one in control. She's tired of taking orders from men. She's willing to do anything to be queen of the streets, but when a deal she makes with the enemy comes back to haunt her, her dream is turned into a nightmare. Hopeless and struggling to keep her head above water, Jewel meets Misty, who seems to be her savior. They quickly form a bond, but when that bond is broken and the mist turns to rain, Jewel finds herself in the middle of a storm that she might not make it out of.
